U.S. Congressional Summit
On Exchange Rates and the Dollar
Washington, DC

October 25, 1985

The Honorable William J. Casey
Director
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear Bill:

On behalf of a bipartisan coalition in the United States Congress, from House Majority Leader Jim Wright to Senate Republican Policy Chairman Bill Armstrong, this is to invite you formally to attend the U.S. Congressional Summit on the Exchange Rate and the Dollar this fall in Washington.

This small, by-invitation-only international gathering will discuss linking currency reform with trade reform, will probe politically feasible alternatives to rising protectionist sentiment, and will weigh the costs and benefits of achieving a more stable exchange rate system.

Out of this Summit, an on-going Commission on Currency Reform will be appointed to report to the Tokyo economic talks in May 1986, among its other tasks.

The Congressional Summit will take place November 12 and 13, 1985 at the National Academy of Sciences. On the evening of November 11, there will be a private reception in honor of all participants in the Federal Reserve Board's top floor chambers.

We, as the Summit's founders and organizers, thought you would be interested in this important political and economic gathering. As you can see from the enclosed list of participants, there is an emerging cross-ideological consensus worldwide that the current international monetary system is a significant factor affecting the ability of manufacturers, farmers and businessmen to work efficiently. The system needs to be reviewed and this is the first step.

Falling between the Group of Five Accord announced September 22, 1985 and next year's head-of-state economic talks in Tokyo, this Congressional effort will serve as a unique catalyst for highlighting possible paths to exchange rate stability and avenues for increased world economic growth.

In a climate of growing protectionist sentiment, this once-arcane subject is on the front burner for many policymakers. We hope you can be our guest.

Please call (202) 863-0203 or (202) 863-0167 to arrange for credentials to this private event.

Jack Kemp

Sincerely,

Bill Bradley
